

UNO Student Senate allocates fee money

By Gary DiSilvestro and Mark Norris

The Student Senate approved budget requests totalling $5,610 last Thursday night, more money than that body has allocated in the last six months.

The largest budget item allocated was $4,300 for the student typing center. The funds will be used to buy electric typewriters and seven new typing tables. The center is located in room 134 of the Milo Bail Student Center (MBSC), and is available to any student who has not received a Fund A refund.

The monies for the requests derive from the contingency fund of Fund A student fees.

Sen. Guy Mockelman said he considered the expenditure a "positive step" for Student Government. "It benefits the students right now," he said.

In addition, the senate approved allocations of $1,000 to send 25 UNO criminal justice students to a conference in Louisville, Ky.; $230 for miscellaneous travel expenses for United Minority Students; and $80 for business cards for Student Government members.

Additionally, the Executive Committee approved $2,300 to send four UNO students to a United States Student Association conference in Washington, D.C.; $350 to Student President/Regent Florene Langford for travel expenses connected with the Nebraska State Student Association (NSSA); and $150 to a general fund to pay travel expenses of UNO students working with NSSA.

The Executive Committee approved the requests, in lieu of the full senate, due to a controversy surrounding the nature of the requests, and the lack of quorum.

In other business, the senate:
— Approved by a vote of 15-2-2-1 a resolution critical of Chancellor Del Weber's decision to close the office of the UNO ombudsman.

— Approved by a vote of 14-2-2 a resolution which calls upon the Omaha Police Division to provide increased security in Elmwood Park. The resolution cited the recent rape of a UNO student there, and the lack of authority for Campus Security to patrol off campus. The resolution was offered by Langford and Speaker Frank Rowley.

— Unanimously passed a resolution introduced by Sen. Jon Tautz which instructs the Student Affairs Committee to study a proposal introduced by State Sen. Gerald Koch of Ralston, Legislative Bill 938, which would allow public schools to operate child care centers under different rules than are currently applied under Nebraska law.

— Listened to Langford announce the formation of a child care committee to be chaired by Graduate Sen. Jacqueline McGlade and Sen. Jeff Bohlken.

— Re-appointed Lucy Long to the position of Chief Justice of the Student Court. Scott Clark was also appointed to the court.

— Appointed six new senators: Steve Kucirek, College of Business Administration; Steve Montag, CBA; Steve Willis, University Division; Louie McGraghan, Education; Ron Cline, College of Public Affairs and Community Service; and Charles Polk, Junior class.

The senate will meet again tomorrow night at 7 in the Gallery Room of MBSC.

Appointments pending

Child Care Committee formed

Memos to confirm the appointment of members to the Child Care Committee were being delivered Tuesday, according to Carmen Mattes, Secretary to Richard Hoover, vice chancellor of educational and student services.

Mattes said the names of the appointees would not be released until they were all notified.

The committee chairman will be Don Skeahan, director of the Milo Bail Student Center.

The committee, which will consist of three students, three faculty members, and two staff members, is being formed to study the need for a child care center on the UNO campus.

Beth Arnold, director of the Women's Resource Center, said a profile of the student population should be included in the committee's study.

More than 50 percent of the students at UNO are women, Arnold said.

According to Arnold, men pay less than 25 percent of child care costs, even when ordered to pay such costs by the courts. This places most of the financial burden for child care on women, making less money available to them to attend college, she said.

If a child care center were organized at UNO, a co-op system might be advantageous, Arnold said. This system would reduce costs to the users by allowing them to work in the center in exchange for child care services, she added.

Not everyone using the center would be required to work there. Other financial arrangements could be made, Arnold said.

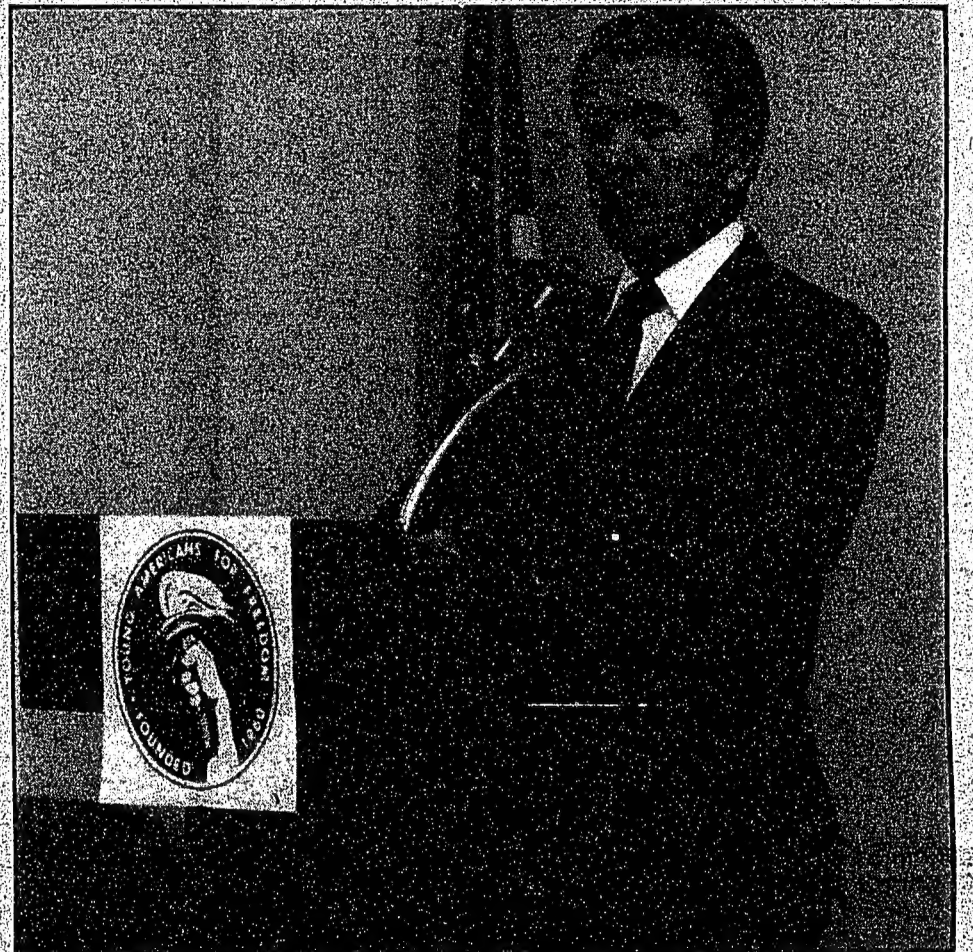

Three or four years ago a student-operated center was set up, but closed after about a year due to lack of funds, she added.

Keck: 'New Federalism' meets local human needs

Keck

Jim Gulizia

By Anne Johnson
Republican senatorial candidate James Keck said last Wednesday that President Reagan's proposed "New Federalism" is the best way to meet human needs at the local level.

"There's no way you can stand in Washington and write rules and regulations and criteria that will equally apply all over the U.S.," said Keck, who is seeking the seat currently held by Democrat Edward Zorinsky.

Keck, who spoke to approximately 30 people at a meeting of the UNO chapter of Young Americans for Freedom, said he is convinced that Americans want a balanced federal budget, and want the private sector and local governments to determine how best to meet the needs of the people.

When asked if the New Federalism would ensure uniformity among the states, or lead to possible migration by poor people to states which would benefit them the most, Keck said the worst drawback to Reagan's proposal is the possibility of another bureaucracy at the state level.

Keck, a retired Air Force lieutenant general with 37 years of military service, said the biggest issue on the minds of Nebraskans is the economy. He blamed deficit spending as the root cause of inflation, high interest rates, and most unemployment.

"The only way to get a balanced budget is to get a constitutional amendment that requires it," Keck said. He said he supports such an amendment which is currently before the U.S. Senate, and added that many states, including Nebraska, already have one.

Keck said the second most important issue for Nebraskans is agriculture.

He said it is necessary to develop a long-range system to increase the demand for agricultural products. He suggested expanding world markets, and finding other uses for agricultural products as possible solutions.

"We need people with influence that can properly represent our requirements," said Keck.

He added the Reagan administration's farm bill was the product of a "lack of leadership in the Senate," and that it failed to convince people to increase price supports to higher levels.

Keck said he forsee "no real solution" to the problem in 1982, and expects the price of commodities to continue to be depressed. "I'd vote with the farmers because they are in deep, deep trouble. If I'm elected, it's going to be from the farm community and I'll recognize them as a basic constituency."

Keck also addressed some foreign policy issues at the meeting.

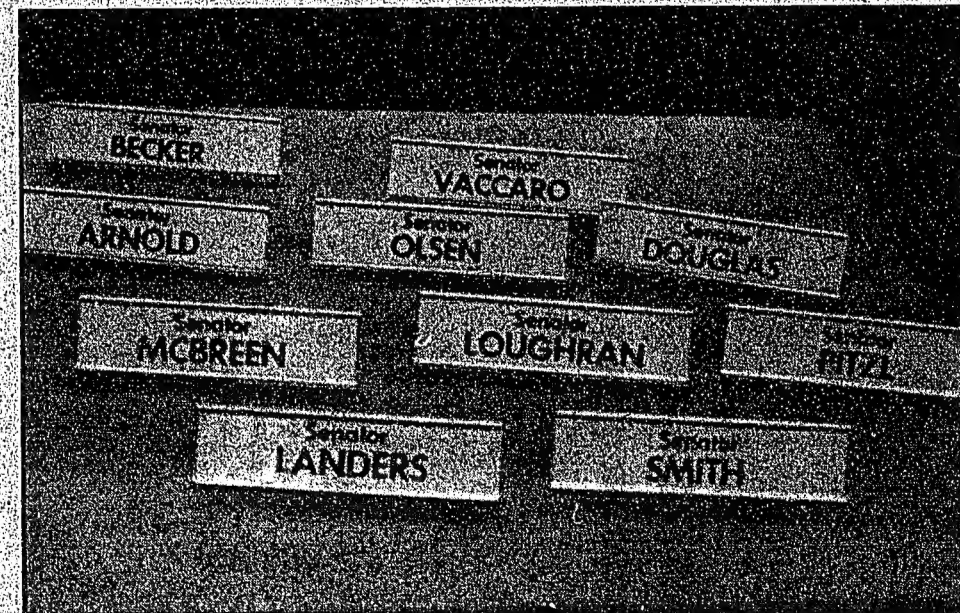

He said the U.S. has fallen behind the Soviet Union in both defense spending and strategic arms. Keck said America should at least be even, if not ahead of the Soviet Union in nuclear arms.

If the U.S. is strong enough, Keck said, "We can negotiate from strength and eventually come up with arms limitations and arms reductions talks."

"We've reached the point where the Soviet Union feels, because of what we've planned, that they have more to gain by agreeing on limitations and reductions," Keck said. He said he expected such "meaningful discussions" within the next year.

Keck said the federal government should "decrease the amount of increases" in defense spending. "You don't solve

'Disruptive Student' proposal reviewed by faculty

By Joseph Brennan

A proposal addressing "disruptive student behavior" at UNO is currently under review by the Faculty Senate.

Senate President Michael Gillespie, associate professor of philosophy, said the Faculty Senate was asked to make suggestions about the proposal, submitted by Richard Hoover, vice chancellor for educational and student services.

According to Hoover, the proposal is designed to set up procedures for faculty and staff to deal with "students acting up in class" or "the mentally unbalanced student." Since the proposal is not in finished form, however, Hoover said it is "inappropriate" to discuss it in detail.

Hoover said the proposal was not a revision or amendment of the Board of Regents' bylaws, which includes a section entitled "Responsibilities and Rights of Students."

"My understanding is that it's a supplement," to existing NU policy about student behavior, said Gillespie. He added that one of the concerns of the senate is that the proposal not be so broad as to lend itself to violation of students' rights.

When asked why Hoover submitted the proposal at this time, Gillespie said, "We asked that, too. The claim is not that there's been an increase in this sort of thing (disruptive behavior)."

Gillespie said that the proposal is directed, in part, to younger faculty members unfamiliar with the procedures for dealing with a student who displays violent, unstable, or threatening behavior.

The regents' bylaws on student rights have been published on pages 24 to 32 of the 1981-82 UNO Student Handbook. Section eight states in part:

"Allegations of student misconduct shall be forwarded in writing to the office of the vice chancellor for educational and student services . . . if facts substantiate the charges, the vice chancellor or his designee may seek to resolve the matter via informal, oral remonstrance (no record to be kept); determine if the circumstance warrants medical or other professional attention and refer the matter to appropriate professional officials or agencies . . ."

Additionally, section eight lists four other disciplinary procedures: written reprimand, disciplinary probation, suspension, and expulsion.

The statement of student rights and responsibilities deals extensively with other issues as well, such as admissions, law, privacy, right to distribution of printed materials on campus, plagiarism, and peaceful demonstration and disruptive action.

" . . . Disciplinary procedures are implemented on an experimental basis and subject to review by the regents," according to the concluding statement of the policy.

Gillespie said that it is rare when a student becomes violent or disruptive, but that there has been "the usual amount of cases" of students requiring disciplinary action reported by the faculty. He said that the Hoover proposal is "not a change in policy," but merely a clarification of existing policy, although he said some aspects of it are superfluous.

Gillespie said Hoover is not trying to ignore students' rights, noting that the proposal is prefaced by a restatement of the regents' policy endorsing both rights and responsibilities of students.

He said it is unlikely the senate would take any formal action on the proposal.

Student Senate meeting ends with hallway confusion

By Gary DiSilvestro and Mark Norris

Student Senators ended their meeting Thursday night in the hallway outside their room in the Milo Bail Student Center (MBSC) with one senator accusing another of abuse of power.

The charge of abuse of power was leveled against newly-appointed Sen. Steve Kucirek of the College of Business Administration by Junior Class Sen. Jon Taute.

The controversy began when Kucirek objected to proposed travel funds for UNO students working with the Nebraska State Student Association (NSSA), a student lobbying group. UNO students voted to form an NSSA chapter last October.

The senate was preparing to vote on budget requests of $500 for travel expenses for Student President, Regent Florene Langford and other students in connection with the NSSA. The senate was also preparing to vote on a $2,300 request to send students to a conference of the United States Student Association, in Washington, D.C.

Kucirek refused to vote on the matters. He then left the meeting, causing the senate to lose quorum, or the number of senators needed to conduct business.

Sen. Guy Mockelman then asked for a "call of the house." According to senate rules, any senators on the premises of MBSC must then re-enter the meeting. Kucirek refused, saying "I don't like the NSSA."

Taute said if Kucirek did not come back into the room he would "file a formal malfeasance of office charge against him."

"We have a man who was just appointed who is more interested in pulling parliamentary tricks," said Taute of Kucirek.

Senators then moved out into the hall. "We're calling a roll call in the hall," said Graduate Sen. Jacqueline McGlade.

When informed by Student Organizations Advisor William Munson that such action might not be appropriate, acting Senate Speaker Greg Mertz called for a recess and adjourned the meeting to the senate's Executive Committee.

The Executive Committee approved the budget requests.

In addition to Kucirek, other senators were critical of the senate's procedures during the meeting.

Sen. L. Scott Miller of the College of Continuing Studies told his colleagues throughout the meeting that they were not abiding by the rules of the senate. He said he thought budget items and resolutions were being "railroaded" through the meeting, and that he was "tired of usurping order just to cater to the needs of pet projects."

Miller was referring to Langford's presentation of resolutions during her report. Langford denied she was presenting "pet projects."

"We've got to get together," said Graduate Sen. Jim Ward. He objected to what he called "parliamentary tricks."

Kucirek said he left the meeting because "things are just being pushed through this body." He served on the senate previously, including a term as speaker.

"Kucirek was a hypocrite," said Arts and Sciences Sen. Don Carlson. "When he was speaker, he didn't like people leaving and that is what he did tonight."

The first resolution brought forward by Langford was written by McGlade. It dealt with Chancellor Del Weber's decision to close the office of the university ombudsman.

The resolution said the office has "proven to be an effective liaison between students and the administration." In part, the resolution states:

"The need for such an office to serve as a liaison is essential to protect the rights of the students. Student Government, by its inherent nature, is entrusted to protect the rights of all students."

"We condemn any administrative action to dissolve the office of the ombudsman, and resolve that such action would . . . constitute a serious violation of all rights of the students of UNO."

Langford said the ombudsman provided the "only objective outlet" for students with grievances against the administration or faculty members.

Miller moved to table the resolution.

Supporting a move to kill the resolution, Kucirek said "Polly Nimmer (the current ombudsman) is ineffectual."

"This is the time for us to take a stand," said Arts and Sciences Sen. Eric Whitner. "We need to let the students know we are behind them."

Miller said he "had a problem" with the manner in which resolutions were presented to the senate without a previous "good looking through." When called upon, he voted no "with right of explanation." Miller said he disagreed with the statement that the ombudsman office is "effective."

Whitner responded by voting "Hell yes, with no explanation." The resolution passed 15-2-2-1. The vote was as follows:

Yes: Bohlken, Carlson, Cline, McGlade, McGranaghan, Mertz, Mockelman, Muus, Olson, Polk, Vaiskunas, Ward, Whitner, Willis, Taute.

No: Kucirek, Miller.

Abstain: Millard, Walker.

Not voting: David Montag.

Ray Mandery oversees SG-UNO treasury

By Mark Norris

Student Government (SG-UNO) Treasurer Ray Mandery is the person in charge of paying the bills run up by SG-UNO and its agencies.

Mandery was appointed to the position last semester after the previous treasurer resigned.

"Ray's selection was one of the very good decisions made by Student Government," said Shekar Padath, director of International Students Services. "He's much better than past treasurers. He's very helpful, and the important thing is you can get him when you need him."

William Munson, advisor to student organizations, said, "He's one of the most reliable treasurers, and I guess one of the best we've ever had due to his reliability."

"Ray inherited problems left by previous treasurers," Munson said. Mandery took over after a period of vacancy which created a "backlog of business," he added.

"For Ray, at least the first two months he played the catch-up game," Munson said.

"When I first started," said Mandery, "everything was so far behind I had to learn everything on my own."

Chief Administrative Officer Sandra Winschief said of Mandery, "He's done a lot in the way of putting everything in exact order and made work run a lot smoother."

The duties of the treasurer include making monthly budget reports, paying SG-UNO bills such as insurance for the Student Legal Assistance Service and central storage charges, and chairing the Student Activities Budget Commission (SABC).

Preparing for the SABC is the most active part of the treasurer's position, and according to Munson, this is an area in which Mandery excels.

Asked why he applied for the position, Mandery said, "I wanted to get involved. It looked fun and challenging, and I wanted to do it. I wasn't too sure what Student Government was doing."

Mandery was a part-time student at UNO until last fall, when he joined the Air Force ROTC program to complete his degree in business administration faster, and also get a commission.

As a part-time student, Mandery said he was never interested in what SG-UNO was doing, but became interested after becoming a full-time student.

Mandery said a lack of student involvement at UNO also interested him in the treasurer's job.

He added that he hoped students would become more involved in campus activities rather than simply attend classes. He said SG-UNO has much to give to students.

Keck favors 'New Federalism'

(continued from page 1) the defense problem with purely a blank check," he said, adding: "The Department of Defense should be subjected to the same type of scrutiny and belt-tightening as every other part of the government."

Keck said the key to international relations is consistency. He described Central America as an area of vital importance to the U.S., adding that a Communist influence has begun to move into South America and Mexico.

He said the U.S. is faced with two alternatives in El Salvador: one alternative is to supply money to a totalitarian government which is ruthless and anti-Communist; the other is to "walk away and allow Central America to be run from Havana or Moscow." Keck said the first alternative is "the lesser of two evils. If we don't supply arms to El Salvador, someone else will."

Keck said the present Republican majority in the Senate aids the achievement of most of his goals. However, he said if the Republicans lose the majority this year or in 1984, "we'll have Ted Kennedy in the U.S. Senate and Tip O'Neill in the House, and there's no way we can do the kind of things I've been talking about."

Keck said he "disagrees totally" with Zorinsky's view that it makes little difference whether one is a Republican or Democrat.

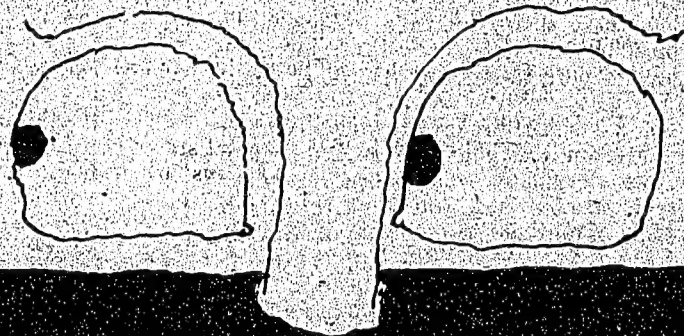

"The first vote (in the Senate) is for leadership and it's done in caucus."

Keck said Zorinsky has voted conservatively, but that he takes exception to some of his votes and his "indecisiveness."

"He'll vote one way in committee and another way on the floor. Sometimes he'll vote on the same issue two different ways."

Keck said the vital issue for Republicans in the 1982 elections is chairmanship of committees, subcommittees, and leadership of the Senate.

"In 1984, the arithmetic is against us," Keck said. "If we lose the majority in '82 or '84, we're in trouble."

Comment — Bull

A group of radicals is passing around a drawing of a cow misrepresenting the student fee structure at UNO. Their "big lie" propaganda encourages students to get their Fund A refunds.

What they don't mention is that this relatively small portion ($7.50) of your student fees also supports a variety of entertainment and educational programs presented by SPO. This cretin's cartoon also omits the Handicapped Student Organization.

The false front lists a campus visit by Rev. Darrell Rupiper as a fees expenditure. The person responsible for the cartoon was told long ago that no student fee monies were used for that appearance. This is a case of propaganda before principle.

Will you allow these sleazy methods to sway your actions? Will you allow these self-centered extremists the personal pleasure of persuading you with lies? Fight back.

The flip side of this sheet, brought to you by Young Americans for Freedom, asks you if you are old enough to make your own decisions. What a condescending attitude. The real question is do you think this small band of zealots is intelligent enough to mold your opinions?

At last Thursday's Student Senate meeting, Ken Spikes, chairman of the UNO chapter of Young Americans for Freedom, was asked what he thought were good recipients of fee monies.

"Student Government is good. I think the Gateway is a good program, (and) I think the student agencies are good," responded Spikes.

We agree. Save the services we expect as students. Respond to this ploy with disgust, not action.

To the Editor:

I have frequently used the bookstore for three years, and have not appreciated the coldness that is received from the clerks toward the customers.

First of all, the "ladies" at the candy department act as if one is intruding in their small clique, and interrupting their gossip time, when a customer needs assistance.

When a student is locating or pricing an item at the bookstore, it is not uncommon to see the clerks look up with their familiar frowns, expecting the student to know the location and price of the item.

I am aware the clerks have a stressful job catering to the needs of the many students who attend UNO. But let them have respect for the student, without us, the bookstore would not be in existence and neither would the clerks' jobs.

Mr. President, meet Lord Keynes

He didn't mean to do it — it wasn't his intention — but Mr. Reagan has stumbled into Keynesianism, so-called after the English economist, Lord John Maynard Keynes, whose memory tortures the reactionary right almost as painfully as the naked ladies displayed in Playboy magazine.

If the noble lord were alive today he would commend Mr. Reagan for coming to Congress with a $100 billion deficit in the federal budget. That is what Keynesian economists prescribe when unemployment grows high and the economy turns flabby. A healthy deficit makes especially good sense during this period when so many highly-paid white collar people are being laid off, even while inflation continues to eat up buying power, albeit at diminishing rates, and the much talked about tax decreases are canceled out by high Social Security payments.

The result is that people have less money to spend. Therefore, there is less demand for goods, and fewer jobs for the people who make them. Supply-side economics isn't going to yield up its cornucopia of prosperity unless money is quietly inserted into the wallets of the multitudes. If you are a business person, why supply, why make and manufacture, if you can't see enough people out there with the wherewithal to buy? If you want supply, you'd best make sure there is demand.

To get people working, we've got to get other people buying, and one of the ways to get money into people's pockets is to have the government spend more than it collects in taxes. That's the infamous deficit spending for which the Democratic Party has been castigated so loudly, although Mr. Ford and Mr. Nixon were rather good at it too. Now comes Mr. Reagan, the latest of a seemingly endless line of men who run for office promising a balanced budget, only to capitulate in his turn, to give up and tell us that receipts and expenses will not even out.

When the lines in front of the unemployment offices grow shorter there will be enough time to re-dedicate ourselves to bringing income and outgo into line. What we ought to be doing now is throwing off this conviction we've saddled ourselves with that deficits equal inflation. They don't.

A hundred billion sounds like a huge sum, and it's more than jelly beans, but it is not big compared to some past deficits which have not brought on inflation. If you look at the red ink in the last years of Herbert Hoover's administration, you'll see that as a percentage of either the federal budget or gross national product, President Reagan's deficit is quite small. It figures out to about a third of Hoover's.

The Hoover deficit, as members of your grandparents' generation will bear witness, did not lead to inflation. Prices collapsed. The purchasing power of the dollar grew. It was a paradisaical moment for lenders who were being repaid their loans — if they were being repaid — in dollars that were worth 10, 20 percent or more than they were when the money was originally lent. Despite a massive federal deficit, the country was going through deflation, not inflation.

If nothing else, the harrowing experience of the early '30s should demonstrate that there is no one-to-one causality between deficits and inflation. What occurred during the Hoover debacle was that the Federal Reserve Board was diminishing the money supply. Instead of printing too much money — the sin which brings inflation down on our heads — they were gobbling up dollar bills and throwing them in a furnace. The total money supply was shrinking, thereby driving prices down and the purchasing power of the dollar up.

So we can live with the minus $100 billion Mr. Reagan is writing in the national ledger as long as he keeps the Fed from printing too much money. This the president is doing, but it comes hard to the Fed, which prefers small budget deficits. That allows it to print money, foster lower interest rates, and be popular.

It's for elected officials, however, to be popular. The appointed ones are paid to get dead cats thrown at them. Many a defunct feline is being tossed at the Fed just now for the tight money that people associate with high interest rates. That's for the board of governors to suffer in as good a humor as they can muster, while we ponder whether or not Mr. Reagan's deficit is large enough to pull us out of our current economic funk.

Mavericks beat Vikings

By Jeff Heineman

UNO erased a 31-30 halftime deficit Friday night by scoring nine unanswered points and putting on a strong defensive show to come away with a 70-63 basketball victory over Augustana.

Senior Vernon Manning led the defensive effort, which held the Vikings without a field goal during two nine-minute spans in the game.

The 6-1 guard said, "I was just doing my job" in describing his performance, but he gave Augustana fits all night long by grabbing five rebounds, making seven steals, and dishing out nine assists, in addition to scoring five points.

Early in the game, UNO found itself in foul trouble as Augustana took advantage of its man to man defense and went inside to 6-9 Mark Smed and 6-7 Brian Lange-land. The move resulted in two three-point plays, two quick fouls on Maverick forwards Terry Sodawasser and Tony Cunningham, and an 18-12 lead for the Vikings with 14 minutes left in the half.

In the next nine minutes, however, Augustana couldn't buy a basket as the zone defense the Mavs switched to took away their inside game and limited them to just six points on free throws.

UNO, however, could do little better hitting from the field, but they did manage to pull ahead, 24-22, on Dean Thompson's layup with 6:25 remaining.

During the rest of the half, neither team was able to gain the upper hand, and with eight seconds left, two free throws by Augustana's Carl Gonder allowed the Vikings to take a 31-30 lead into the lockerroom. The 6-8 Gonder finished the half with a perfect 10 of 10 from the free throw line.

A crowd of 3,800 saw UNO's offense come to life in the second half.

Thompson started things off with a 17-foot jump shot followed by two Cunningham baskets from inside and deep along the baseline. Freshman Dan Rust then banked in a short turnaround, and center Henry Riedel added a free throw to complete the 9-0 scoring spree and put the Mavs up 39-31 with 15 minutes left in the game.

Augustana refused to fold, however, and pulled within three, 43-40, on Lange-land's inside basket with 10:30 remaining, but they could get no closer as the Mavericks outscored the Vikings 14-5 over the next three and a half minutes.

UNO's defense finished the job by keeping Augustana from getting within 10 points until the last 19 seconds, with the help of a full-court press Mav coach Bob Hanson said was used to kill time. "If (the press) forced Augustana to take more time getting up the court, and then to get reorganized," he said.

Cunningham, who kept the Mavs in the game early with 4 of 4 shooting from the field, led UNO scoring with 20 points. Thompson added 18.

Augustana's Smed led all scorers with 21 points while Gonder, who finished a perfect 12 of 12 from the line, added 18.

Sodawasser and Riedel led all rebounders with seven each, and the Mavs'

No. 1 Mavs edge SDSU

By Kelli Reagan

The score was tied at 61. South Dakota State University had one time out remaining with 14 seconds left in the game. UNO's Rick Keel inbounded to Vernon Manning. Manning to Keel to Henry Riedel to Dean Thompson, who with three seconds left, put it up from 17 feet and hit it. Final score UNO 63, SDSU 61.

Saturday night's game was very unstable, with the lead changing 17 times, 13 in the second half. UNO had its lowest shooting percentage of the season, hitting only 37.1 from the field.

Scoring was led by Thompson with 14 points and Riedel with 13 points, who also yanked down 12 rebounds. The Jack-rabbits were led by Bob Winzenburg's 20 points and Mark Tetzlaff's 12 points and 10 rebounds.

Going into halftime South Dakota State led 38-36. "We made defensive match-up changes," said UNO coach Bob Hanson. "I also talked to the team about taking better shots, checking off the boards and not fouling so much."

The lead belonged to both teams 12 times in the second half, and the game was tied twice. Neither team led by more than three.

The score was tied at 59 with 1:29 left to play when sophomore Joe Ashley committed his fifth foul, sending UNO's Terry Sodawasser to the line. Both free throws were good, and the Mavs took the lead.

"I wasn't under any pressure at all," said Sodawasser. "I've been shooting 85 percent from the line and I just put them up like I normally do."

"It's a great win," said Hanson. "We rebounded well and only committed two team fouls in the second half."

UNO is now 19-3 and 9-1 in the conference. SDSU dropped to 11-11 and 4-6 in the conference.

UNO is on the road again this weekend. They travel to Grand Forks to meet North Dakota Friday and to Fargo to meet North Dakota State Saturday.

The Mavs return to the Fieldhouse Feb. 19 and 20 to play Morningside and South

Maverick swimmers show authority at meet

The UNO swim team won three out of four of its meets last Saturday. "Had we won the last relay in the women's meet against Coe College, we would've won them all," said Coach Paul Cerio.

Grace College men's team was left behind in the wake of UNO, 60-19. Grace might have done better, but it had only two men competing against UNO's 12.

Coe College fared a bit better with more manpower, but the UNO men still beat them, 63-39.

Grace had a stronger lineup in its women's swim team, but it didn't help them against UNO. Again they lost, 77-46.

The last meet of the day was neck and neck. In the second to last event, the score was 59-55 in UNO's favor. But the 400-yard freestyle results dashed the UNO women's hopes, as Coe won 62 to 59.

"I think we did a good job overall," said Cerio. "We're getting better as we go along."

Kaufman out

What started out as an excellent weekend ended in disappointment for the UNO wrestling team, as they lost one of its best wrestlers for the rest of the season.

Senior All-American Ryan "The Cobra" Kaufman suffered a shoulder separation in Saturday's match against North Dakota State, in which UNO lost, 22-14.

Kaufman was wrestling with Mike Langlais in the 142-pound division. Langlais had just tied the score 11-11 with an escape and a takedown when Kaufman was injured.

Just the day before, Kaufman had overwhelmed North Dakota University's Jared Anderson 33-3, to help his team win the dual 39-3. Results from Friday:

Lady Mavs pound SD Jackrabbits

By Judy Schmidt

The Lady Mavs were letting their pride show Saturday night when they ran over the South Dakota State Jackrabbits on the basketball court, 63-39.

According to Coach Cherri Mankenberg, the game was "a matter of pride" because of UNO's loss to SDSU on Jan. 30. "This was a good game," said Mankenberg. "A lot of players got to see a lot of action, and that's more like it."

But "action" wasn't the word for the first half of the game. One of the main problems of the evening was not with the players, but with the court -- it wasn't big enough. Most of the many turnovers that slowed the game down occurred when the ball was either knocked or thrown out of bounds.

UNO took the lead four minutes into the game, and kept it throughout. It was in the last second of the first half that freshman Julie Hengemuehler scored from 22 feet out to give the Lady Mavs their biggest lead of the evening so far, 27-18.

In the second half, the Lady Mavs increased their lead slowly if unsteadily. Their biggest lead of the evening, 24 points, came with 41 seconds to go. All the Lady Mavs scored, with junior Lisa Linthacum leading the pack with 12 points.

The high scorer for the Jackrabbits was freshman Jennie Johnson, also with 12 points, but she fouled out with 9:25 left to play.

At the start of the men's basketball game that followed, Mankenberg was given an award for "unselfish devotion and distinguished leadership as coach," along with some red carnations, from Coors and the Pen and Sword society.

But nothing was given to the Lady Mavs Friday night as they barely skimmed by the Augustana Vikings 67-63, when Hengemuehler took a pass from half court and tossed it in with 3 seconds left.

Augustana senior Cindy Heyden, 6-0, gave the Lady Mavs the most trouble. "We couldn't stop her," said Mankenberg. Heyden scored 36 points, more than half of her team's total, and shot 100 percent from the free throw line.

The game was tight throughout, with Augustana leading 29-28 at the half. It took UNO 15 minutes to get its first lead, one point.

With one minute left in the game, it was still up for grabs. But Hengemuehler was the Vikings' downfall. "She was the one that hurt us the most," said Augustana coach Eileen Friest.

The Lady Mavs, now with a 15-5 record, will be out on the road this weekend as they face North Dakota in Grand Forks, N.D., on Friday, and North Dakota State in Fargo on Saturday. Friday's results:

No. 1 Mavericks defeat Vikings

defense produced a big edge in turnovers, 20-9.

The victory was Hanson's 200th. "It's important to me," Hanson said, "because you have to win no. 200 before you win 201, 202 and 203. I just didn't want to put any unnecessary pressure on the players."

Hansen's 200th win was also delayed a bit at tip-off by a singing telegram wishing him good luck.
